Origins and Development of the Big Ten Football Championship

The Big Ten Football Championship Game was established to determine the conference champion in a definitive on-field contest. Prior to the game's inception, the Big Ten champion was decided by regular-season records, which occasionally led to shared titles and ambiguity. The first championship game was held in 2011 following the conference's expansion and the introduction of divisions, which allowed for a clear championship matchup between the winners of the East and West divisions. This format aligned with the NCAA's regulations permitting conferences with at least 12 teams to hold a championship game.

Formation of Divisions and Eligibility

The addition of Nebraska in 2011 expanded the Big Ten to 12 teams, prompting the conference to split into two divisions: Legends and Leaders, later realigned to East and West divisions. This divisional structure was essential for the championship game, as each division winner earned a spot in the title contest. The championship game was designed to enhance competition and create a marquee event to showcase the conference's best teams on a neutral field, typically held at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis.

As the first African American to play quarterback, George Taliaferro was a trailblazer whose athletic prowess earned him accolades throughout his football career. Instrumental in leading Indiana University to an undefeated season and undisputed Big Ten championship in 1945, Taliaferro was a star when many major universities had no black players on their rosters and others were stacking black players behind white starters. George Taliaferro would later rack up impressive statistics while playing professionally for the New York Yanks, Dallas Texans, Baltimore Colts, and Philadelphia Eagles. His athletic prowess did little to prevent him from facing segregation and discrimination on a daily basis, but his popularity as an athlete also gave him a platform. Playing professionally gave Taliaferro more opportunity to use football to fight oppression and to interact with other important trailblazers, like Joe Louis, Nat King Cole, Muhammad Ali, and Congressman John Lewis. Race and Football in America tells Taliaferro's story and profiles the experiences of other athletes of color who were recognized for their athleticism yet oppressed for their skin color, as they fought (and continue to fight) for equal rights and opportunities. Together these stories provide an insightful portrait of race in America. "A portrait of a young man who overcame the obstacles of racism, the military draft, and the death of his father. His vehicle for climbing over obstacles was athletic prowess and inner strength." —Jim Baumgartner, College Football Hall of Fame big ten football championship game history: The Psychedelic Sixties: a Social History of the United States, 1960-69 Richard T. Stanley, 2013-05-28 The Psychedelic Sixties were turbulent times filled with periods of ecstasy and despair. Who could have predicted that President Kennedy's Camelot would end with his televised assassination? Or that Harvard psychologist Timothy Leary's Concord Prison Project would evolve into his becoming the pied piper of LSD, the Psychedelic Revolution, and the Hippie Movement? To the credit of many Americans, a key characteristic of the Psychedelic Sixties was the search for solutions to society's social problems. But who could have predicted that President Johnson's Great Society would soon fall victim to race riots, student protests, and an increasingly unpopular war in Vietnam? Throughout the sixties, regular folks tried to find relief by watching TV comedies, motion picture musicals, and major sports events. And music --- from The Beatles to The Rolling Stones. Despite all the decade's chaos and bloodshed, public and private schools at all levels grew at unprecedented rates. And corporate America and our schools were more in cahoots than ever: Want a good job? Get a college degree! And, in 1969, as some Hippies still exclaimed, Tune in, turn on, drop out!, an American named Neil Armstrong WALKED ON THE MOON!
