Overview of Fresno State Speech Pathology Program

The Fresno State speech pathology program is housed within the Department of Communicative Disorders and Deaf Studies. It offers both undergraduate and graduate pathways to prepare students for professional roles in speech-language pathology. The program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology (CAA), ensuring high standards of education. Students gain a solid foundation in anatomy, physiology, and the neurological bases of communication disorders, along with an understanding of developmental and acquired speech and language impairments. The program emphasizes evidence-based practice and integrates current technologies to enhance learning.

Program Mission and Goals

The mission of the Fresno State speech pathology program is to train competent, ethical, and culturally responsive speech-language pathologists. The curriculum is designed to foster critical thinking, communication skills, and clinical competence. Graduates are expected to contribute to the advancement of the field through clinical excellence, research, and community service.

Accreditation and Professional Standards

Fresno State maintains accreditation from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) through the CAA. This accreditation confirms that the program meets rigorous educational and clinical standards, preparing students for the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology (CCC-SLP) and state licensure.

Academic Curriculum and Coursework

The academic curriculum in the Fresno State speech pathology program combines foundational science courses with specialized classes in communication disorders. The program balances theoretical knowledge with applied learning, preparing students for clinical practice and research.

Core Coursework

Students are required to complete courses covering a broad range of topics relevant to speech-language pathology, including:

- Anatomy and Physiology of the Speech and Hearing Mechanism
- Speech and Language Development
- Phonetics and Phonology
- Neurological Bases of Communication
- Assessment and Intervention Techniques
- Voice Disorders
- Fluency and Articulation Disorders
- Augmentative and Alternative Communication
- Research Methods and Statistics

Graduate-Level Coursework

At the graduate level, students engage in advanced study and clinical practicum, focusing on diagnostic evaluation, treatment planning, and evidence-based intervention strategies. Emphasis is placed on working with diverse populations across the lifespan, including pediatric and adult clients with various communication disorders.

Clinical Training and Practical Experience

Clinical training is a cornerstone of the Fresno State speech pathology program, providing students with hands-on experience under the supervision of licensed clinicians. This practical component is essential for developing clinical skills and professional competencies.

On-Campus Clinics

Students participate in the university's on-campus speech and hearing clinic, where they assess and treat clients from the local community. These clinics offer opportunities to work with individuals with speech, language, cognitive-communication, and swallowing disorders in a controlled environment.

Off-Campus Clinical Placements

In addition to on-campus experiences, students complete clinical practicum placements in various settings such as schools, hospitals, rehabilitation centers, and private practices. These externships expose students to real-world challenges and diverse client populations, enhancing their clinical acumen.

Supervision and Evaluation

All clinical experiences at Fresno State are supervised by qualified speech-language pathologists who provide continuous feedback and evaluation. This ensures students meet competency benchmarks and are prepared for professional certification.

Faculty and Research Opportunities

The Fresno State speech pathology program boasts a dedicated faculty with extensive clinical and research expertise. Faculty members are actively involved in advancing the science of communication disorders and contribute to the development of innovative therapeutic approaches.

Faculty Expertise

Faculty specialties include pediatric speech disorders, neurogenic communication disorders, hearing loss rehabilitation, bilingual speech-language pathology, and augmentative communication. Their diverse backgrounds enrich the academic environment and provide students with comprehensive mentorship.

Student Research and Scholarly Activities

Students have opportunities to engage in research projects alongside faculty, gaining experience in data collection, analysis, and presentation. Participation in research fosters critical inquiry and supports evidence-based clinical practice.

Admission Requirements and Application Process

Admission to the Fresno State speech pathology program is competitive and requires applicants to meet specific academic and professional criteria. Prospective students must demonstrate strong academic performance and a commitment to the field of communication sciences.

Undergraduate Admission

Undergraduate applicants must meet general university admission standards and complete prerequisite coursework in biology, psychology, communication, and statistics. A minimum GPA is typically required for progression into the major.

Graduate Admission

The graduate program requires a bachelor's degree in communicative disorders or a related field. Admission criteria often include:

- Official transcripts with competitive GPA
- GRE scores (if applicable)
- Letters of recommendation
- Statement of purpose outlining career goals

- Relevant volunteer or work experience in speech-language pathology

Application Timeline

Applicants should adhere to published deadlines and submit all required documentation on time. Early preparation is recommended to ensure a smooth application process.

Career Outcomes and Licensure Preparation

Graduates of the Fresno State speech pathology program are well-prepared for various professional roles in healthcare, education, and research. The curriculum and clinical training are designed to meet state licensure and ASHA certification requirements.

Certification and Licensure

Completion of the program enables graduates to apply for the Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech-Language Pathology (CCC-SLP) from ASHA. Additionally, they become eligible for state licensure to practice as speech-language pathologists. The program supports students through the clinical fellowship year and certification exams.

Employment Opportunities

Career paths for Fresno State speech pathology alumni include:

- Clinical speech-language pathologist in hospitals and rehabilitation centers
- School-based speech therapist
- Private practice clinician
- Researcher or academic faculty member
- Consultant for speech and hearing technology companies

Student Resources and Support Services

Fresno State provides extensive resources to support speech pathology students throughout their academic journey. These services enhance learning and promote student success.

Academic Advising and Mentorship

Students receive personalized advising from faculty and staff to plan their course schedules, clinical placements, and career development. Mentorship programs help students navigate academic challenges and professional growth.

Laboratory and Technological Resources

The program offers access to state-of-the-art labs and equipment, including speech analysis software, audiometric devices, and communication technology tools. These resources facilitate hands-on learning and research.

Student Organizations and Professional Development

Active student organizations provide networking opportunities, workshops, and community outreach activities. Participation in these groups fosters leadership skills and professional engagement within the field.

fresno state speech pathology: A Coursebook on Scientific and Professional Writing for Speech-Language Pathology, Sixth Edition M.N. Hegde, 2022-12 A Coursebook on Scientific and Professional Writing for Speech-Language Pathology, Sixth Edition is a unique interactive resource to help students develop the strong writing skills necessary for a successful clinical or academic career in speech-language pathology. The book not only describes the principles of good writing, but also contains numerous opportunities to practice writing skills replete with exemplars. The Coursebook is ideal for dedicated courses on scientific and/or professional writing, and can also be used in courses on assessment, research methods, and clinical methods and practicum. The first section of the book is a refresher on the basic rules of grammar, punctuation, and composition. The second section is focused on scientific writing and explains the different types of academic publications, offers tips on how to write without bias, and describes the typical manuscript formatting required for scientific publications. It also includes examples of the “elements of scientific style,” such as capitalization and abbreviations, how to reference sources cited within the text, and how to prepare the reference list. Also covered are how to submit a manuscript to scholarly journals and best practices for proofreading and making revisions. The last section is focused on professional/clinical writing and the various written communications speech-language pathologists (SLPs) prepare as part of their jobs. These include diagnostic reports, brief and comprehensive treatment plans, and progress reports. The book ends with a section on report writing for SLPs working in public schools, including assessment reports, IEPs, and SOAP notes. A unique and student-friendly feature of the book is its practical design. The first two sections provide incorrect exemplars the user can rewrite or write correctly. In the last section, left-hand pages show specific examples of general, scientific, or professional writing, and the corresponding right-hand pages allow students to practice writing. Updates to the Scientific Writing section include: The text incorporates APA 7th edition changes to reference citations and preparation of the reference list, along with updates on how to cite electronic sources. The bias-free writing section is updated and expanded to include appropriate terms and writing style to describe LGBTQ community members. A glossary is provided for easy reference. Information on how to submit content to academic journals and conferences, preparing electronic manuscripts, and making revisions in light of the copyeditor’s comments have been updated to current publishing industry standards. Updates to the Professional Writing section include: The text includes current clinical terminology and practice in speech-language pathology. A new trial-by-trial treatment progress recording sheet has been added to the progress report section. A subjective, objective, assessment, plan (SOAP) progress report written for medical settings has been added, along with a new section on report writing in public schools, which includes an assessment plan that helps determine whether a student meets the school district's criteria for enrollment in clinical speech-language services.
