prairie museum of art and history: Interpreting the Environment at Museums and Historic Sites Debra A. Reid, David D. Vail, 2019-09-19 Interpreting the Environment at Museums and Historic Sites is for anyone who wants to better understand the environment that surrounds us and sustains us, who wants to become a better steward of that environment, and who wants to share lessons learned with others. The process starts by focusing attention on the environment - the physical space that constitutes the largest three-dimensional object in museum collections. It involves conceptualizing spaces and places of human influence; spaces that contain layer upon layer documenting human struggles to survive and thrive. This evidence exists in natural environments as well as city centers. The process continues by adopting an environment-centric view of the spaces destined to be interpreted. This mind-set forms the basis for devising research plans that document how humans have changed, destroyed, conserved and sustained spaces over time, and the ways that the environment reacts. Interpretation built on this evidence then becomes the basis for minds-on engagement with the places that humans inhabit and the spaces that they have changed and continue to manipulate. Interpreting the Environment at Museums and Historic Sites provides a tool kit designed to help you research environmental history, document evidence of human influence on land and the environment over time, and tailor that knowledge to new public engagement. It proposes a multi-disciplinary approach that requires expertise in the humanities as well as the sciences and social sciences to best understand space and place over time. It incorporates case studies of the theory and method of environmental history to explore how human goals take lasting shape in the environment - creating working environments, getting water, generating and harnessing power, growing food, traveling and trading, building things, and preserving natural landscapes. Features include the Interpreting the Environment Tool Kit to help you launch the good work of interpreting the environment: Raw Materials (the evidence): landscape, ecosystems, artifacts, and the built environmentPreparation (methods): thinking like a naturalist/scientist; thinking like a historian; combining approachesPlanning (envisioning the goal): proactive message, stewardship, sustainabilityPartnerships (sharing work): strength in numbers; allying across disciplinary divides; united in efforts to inform the public about their individual and collective effects on the landscape and the environmentPotential: educating the public about people and places is part of a world-wide goal with the cumulative effect of saving the planet, one story at a time.A Timeline and Bibliographic essay round out the book's resources.

prairie museum of art and history: The Museum Artist Orlando Emil Peters, 2015-06-26 The publishing of The Museum Artist was to record the work of one artist who spent his entire life to the portrayal of history through the medium of museums throughout the United States. Born in Monterrey, California to Helen Marie Hall Peters and Cal N. Peters, both artist and my mother author, artist. After several advanced art schools and a stay in the military I spent most of my life as a graphic designer, illustrator and art director in Southern California. When my father was gone I put away his informative writings, and the records that my mother had kept for so many years. As I approached eighty I felt that was left undone, his life as the Museum Artist. My first contact was the University of Wisconsin-Stout. Amazed at the never forgotten attitude and his place in the archives. The first 33 foot long mural has been over the main entrance of Harvey Hall since 1935. The University has a commemoration of the school in 2014-15 and part will be student essays about Cal N. Peters life, work and paintings. As a recent quote from a staff member his presence is still felt in the halls of this University. It is no wonder that I should author The Museum Artist. This book authenticates his work from museum to museum for more than eighty-five years.
