The concept of "sure" in sign language encompasses ideas of certainty, agreement, and confidence. Just as in spoken English, expressing "sure" nonverbally requires clarity to avoid miscommunication. Sign languages utilize handshapes, movements, facial expressions, and body language to convey such abstract concepts effectively. Understanding what "sure" signifies in various contexts helps users select the appropriate sign and expression.

Definition and Semantics

In sign language, "sure" typically means being confident or positive about something. It can serve as an affirmative response equivalent to "yes," or indicate that someone has no doubt. The semantic range of "sure" includes assurance, confirmation, and reliability. These meanings must be conveyed through specific signs and non-manual signals to capture the intended nuance.

Importance in Communication

Expressing certainty clearly is vital in conversations to build trust and understanding. 2. Place the fist near the chin or slightly below the mouth.
3. Move the hand outward and slightly forward away from the face in a confident motion.
4. Accompany the sign with a nod or a confident facial expression to reinforce certainty.

Martin's study results in three important claims: that each of us undergoes personal metamorphoses as a result of education; that these changes can result in a radically altered identity and can therefore be either good or bad; and that each change constitutes a culture crossing which can be accompanied by feelings of guilt, accusations of betrayal, alienation, and a sense of loss.
