sweet science boxing gym: Turn Out the Lights Gary Cartwright, 2010-07-22 Whether the subject is Jack Ruby, Willie Nelson, or his own leukemia-stricken son Mark, when it comes to looking at the world through another person's eyes, nobody does it better than Gary Cartwright. For over twenty-five years, readers of Texas Monthly have relied on Cartwright to tell the stories behind the headlines with pull-no-punches honesty and wry humor. His reporting has told us not just what's happened over three decades in Texas, but, more importantly, what we've become as a result. This book collects seventeen of Cartwright's best Texas Monthly articles from the 1980s and 1990s, along with a new essay, My Most Unforgettable Year, about the lasting legacy of the Kennedy assassination. He ranges widely in these pieces, from the reasons for his return to Texas after a New Mexican exile to profiles of Kris Kristofferson and Willie Nelson. Along the way, he strolls through San Antonio's historic King William District; attends a Dallas Cowboys old-timers reunion and the Holyfield vs. Foreman fight; visits the front lines of Texas' new range wars; gets inside the heads of murderers, gamblers, and revolutionaries; and debunks Viagra miracles, psychic surgery, and Kennedy conspiracy theories. In Cartwright's words, these pieces all record the renewal of my Texas-ness, a rediscovery of Texas after returning home.

sweet science boxing gym: Good with Their Hands Carlo Rotella, 2002 This is a brilliant study, warm and frequently thrilling, of an inspired combination of subjects. Postindustrial American urban culture has found its great poet-theorist in Carlo Rotella.—William Finnegan, author of Cold New World: Growing Up in a Harder Country In the hands of others, we have learned much about the process of deindustrialization. Rotella powerfully brings the reader to the core of these socio-economic transitions in a manner that is almost palpable in its ability to connect the reader to any one of his subjects. Rotella held me, taught me, opened my eyes to an appreciation of new ways of seeing. The writing is electric, the broader conceptual framework is rich and complex, and his touch is deft throughout the book.—Nick Salvatore, coauthor of We All Got History: The Memory Books of Amos Webber sweet science boxing gym: Takedown Andrew Hudak, 2021-07-15 Danger lurks in every corner of River City. The bodies turning up in the waterway that give the city its name are more than enough proof. Who are these young women? Where did they come from, and how can their killer be caught? A drug bust provides a break in the case for the River City Police Department. A loose-lipped informant tells all: the murdered young women are fighters in an underground mixed martial arts tournament run by Leo Manetti, son of infamous River City crime boss Mike “the Hammer” Manetti. However, the police know that they’ll need more than his word to make a case. Detective Sarah Kolchek thought that she was done going undercover. She wants nothing more than to put the dangerous police work behind her and start a family with her fiancé, Dale. Too bad that she’s perfect for the assignment. As an ex-MMA fighter, she’s asked by her lieutenant to go undercover one more time and gather evidence to bring the killer to justice and in the process, take down Leo, Mike “the Hammer,” and the whole Manetti empire. That is, if she doesn’t wind up as one of the bodies in the river herself.

sweet science boxing gym: Identity and Myth in Sports Documentaries Zachary Ingle, David M. Sutera, 2013 Nonfiction films about sports have been around for decades, yet few scholarly articles have been published on these works. In Identity and Myth in Sports Documentaries, editors Zachary Ingle and David M. Sutera have assembled a collection of essays that show how myth and identity—national, religious, ethnic, and racial—are constructed, perpetuated, or questioned in documentaries produced in the United States, France, Australia, Germany, and Japan. This collection is divided into three sections. “American Identity and Myth” contains essays on consumerism, religion in sports, and post-9/11 America. “Race and Ethnicity” examines the ways in which African American, Mexican American, and Jewish identity are portrayed in the documentaries under discussion. “Global Perspectives” features films and TV series produced outside of the United States or those that provide perspectives on the international sport scene. Spanning several decades, the landmark documentaries discussed in this volume include Hoop Dreams, The Endless Summer, The Life and Times of Hank Greenberg, Olympia, and Tokyo Olympiad and address such subjects as baseball, football, basketball, boxing, soccer, surfing, and the Olympics. The essays pose such questions as How are notions of the American dream involved in athletes’ aspirations?, How do media texts from Australia or France construct Australian and French identity, respectively?, and How did filmmakers such as Leni Riefenstahl, Kon Ichikawa, and Bud Greenspan infuse their Olympic documentaries with national ideology despite being intended for an international audience? By tackling these subjects, Identity and Myth in Sports Documentaries is an intriguing read for scholars, students, and the general public alike.
